Question No 1. "Can I see a copy of your Insurance Certificate?"

This is very important, if the contractor is not fully insured then the premises owner (you) would be liable for any injury or 3rd party claims.

Question No 2. "What finishing product are you putting on the floor?"

Watch out for contractors trying to cut corners with your health by putting down "acid cat" 2 pack finishes or other solvent based finishes. These may save you a little money but are very dangerous particularly if children or asthma sufferers will use the room.

Question No 3. "Will the product smell?"

The harsh smelling products are the ones to worry about. They may continue to give off potentially health risking fumes for weeks after the job is completed.

Question No 4. "Is your process dust free?"

Old floor sanding equipment leaves lots of dust in the air, which circulates around the building - leaving you with a big clean up job and rooms which are uninhabitable until the dust has settled. Ask to see the contractor's dust free certificate.

Question No 5. "What guarantee of quality do you give?"

Your floors are a very valuable, you should make yourself confident that you are entrusting them into good hands. Ask for testimonials from previous customers and photos of previous jobs, get a written guarantee.

Question No 6. "What different options do I have?"

Wood is a natural product, so every floor is different, there are many different products each one more suitable in a given situation than the next. Check that your contractor gives you a range of choices and explains the merits of each, so you make the correct decision.
